SACRED WARS

NOTE • FROM • THE PRESIDENT

Having fun again.

I reached a point that could best be described as a thorough reassessment of w.t.f. was going on. I had managed to narrow the focus of my anxiety to the root of the problem. It was that little box on the front cover, and more particularly the three little letters at the bottom of it. You know. . . FEB MAR MAY JUN.

They were the problem.

The company had enough of a financial cushion to survive quite happily for at least four months (if a direct sales comics publishing company doesn't publish it eliminates its greatest expense. . . printing, leaving only taxes and salaries). I started feeling like one of those lower life forms who wins a million dollar lottery and tells the local news channel "Hell, no, I ain't quittin' the mines. I wouldn't know what t'do with m'self. Naw me 'n' the misses plan to put it in the bank fer the kids". It was to say the least, a piercing analogy. For eight years I had (a) drawn Cerebus (b) worked my way through three major relationships (c) slept (d) taken two vacations (e) partied (f) promoted Cerebus.

Of these five endeavours I wanted more (e) and (d). I always get enough (c) because I don't get up until I'm fully awake and bored being horizontal. (b) happens when you least expect it, so it's a good policy to expect it at all times, and (a) and (f) were starting to eat everything that wasn't nailed down. Like my sanity, my attention-span and three quarters of my usable cortex.

Proposition: I run A-V. What I say goes. A-V is secure. I want to forget about it until it's time to refill the bank accounts.

Actually, there's enough there for at least five months, Dave.
Huh?

You won't get all the cheques in on the issue that just came out for another thirty days. That buys you another month.

The Executive Committee (me, that is) sessions raged for days.

What about issue #300?

Why can't I just say I'm doing it 'til March 2003?

People aren't as excited by March, 2003 as they are by doing 300 issues. You want the run to finish with #178 maybe? Leave everybody "what-iffing" you about the missing 122 issues?

So I'll do 300 issues and when they come out they come out.

The way you party, you'll finish 300 when you're 80. You want to do this for another fifty years assuming you last that long?

So I didn't do anything for about three weeks on Cerebus. I puttered around. I did housework. I wrote a few essays for this space that were too dry for the requirements ——— filled about half a legal notepad. It was an enjoyable mix of political speech-writer and essayist. Writing for fun. Not to put somewhere, not to publish, just "watching the wheels" stuff.

I missed doing the book. Gerhard was bored stiff and Karen looked like Lady Order at a Chaos banquet.

So we got two issues done in a little over four weeks. Talked to Gerhard one night after consuming enough beer to wax eloquent on the stuff no one knows about Cerebus but me. I told him the original core of the "Church and State" story-line and mentioned that I was thinking of dropping the whole idea so I can get to the big finish. He persuaded me to leave it in. I had never spoken the dialogue out loud (it came to me three years ago during High Society). Suddenly I can't wait to get to it.

Strange.

Our Back Cover: Signing an autograph for Spider-Man at Mid-Ohio-Con. He told me his real ame was Peter something but that I wasn't supposed to tell anyone. He offered to loan me the tights for Saturday night. "The chicks, man, they love red and blue tights".

PREPARE YOURSELF FOR A LETTER OF PRAISE!

Dear Dave

I was really impressed with your personality at the latest Mid-Ohio-Con. I had met you the year before at the '84 Chicago Con and was favorably impressed but this year my "impressiveness" was more impressed (honest!) I'm sure you remember me ya know I was that one guy with the hat (snicker) Anyways, you looked like the nice side of the Dave Sim who writes those great letter columns. You were the most down-to-earth and most congenial person I met (I didn't get a chance to meet Steve or John T so I can't speak about them). Not to say that the others weren't nice, but you really seemed to be the most "in touch" guy there

My hand was numb for the rest of the day!

I was just innocently standing in line for some autographs and you got up, walked up to me, shook my hand, said something to the effect of "Dave Sim for President" and proceeded down the rest of the line. Gosh wow. A while earlier you had stopped signing stood up, directed your voice to the end of the line and told everyone you were signing as fast as you could (yes, I know you did, but I just wanted to remind you for the purpose of "awestruck edness" on my part) Gee, you complimented me on my hat (perhaps cuz I had Cerebus pins on it), you answered some simple questions without making me feel like real dirt, you even offered to burn my Cerebus and sign the ashes! You drew a quick Cerebus head on one of my friend's books without him asking, personally signed a page of original art to me and constantly were putting up with geeks (judgement on my part, Yea, yea.. well they looked like geeks) huddled around you. Let's just say that I was favorably impressed (I already have, too many times)

Kurt Nvehoh
6320 Autumn Drive,
Hudsonville, MI, 49426

The weekend before the Mid-Ohio-Con, I went to a signing by Jean Chretien at the Provident bookstore here in town, having read the first half of Straight From The Heart the night before. I got there when the store opened and was still seventh or eighth in line. Because he shook hands and talked for a few seconds with each person it seemed to take an excruciatingly long time to reach the front of the line (I dried my right palm on my pants at least a dozen times). I can remember mentally willing him to stand up and acknowledge the people waiting (the line had reached the back of the store by this point and he was only going to be there an hour).

So it was that at Mid-Ohio-Con (the only convention I've been to where the line-ups to get autographs are the centerpiece of the con) I looked down a long line of fans waiting to get books signed and I thought I might as well wave to the ones in the back. I said something about signing as fast as I could and nobody smiled let alone laughed. Taking this to mean "Just sign the damn books, asshole" I put my head down and kept scribbling. Then I said to somebody who had arrived at the front of the line that I wanted to try something. So I got up and shook as many hands as I could down the line "Dave Sim in the Seventh Congressional District" "Damn glad to meet ya" "Dave Sim for President" "Good to see ya" "Dave Sim for County Seat".

One of my most embarrassing moments at the UK Comic Art Convention. As the chap who took the photo explained (a) You don't snort cocaine into your mouth, you snort it up your nose (b) You don't dump it out into your hands because it sticks to them.

My whole mouth was numb for hours but I still think it was a good waste of a hundred and fifty quid.

Not a chuckle. Not a smile. Not a grin.

It wasn't until I got your letter that I realised maybe it did work. So next year, I plan to move my chair from the front to the back of the line at regular intervals and then to the middle. Just for fun.

Dave,

Cerebus is so good that it sucks, you know why? Because I have to somehow come up with 210 dollars for a fine copy of #1. I wouldn't spend that on just any comic.

I wanted to ask a couple of things, first I noticed that 63 had a higher circulation than # a later issue. Why? Do you figure Mind Games sell better than other issues, or has readership dropped? And second, where's Connie?

Here is something you may want to think about; have you heard of a company called Inform? They make software text adventure games for various computers. For instance the Zork trilogy. You might make another small or big fortune if you were to produce a Cerebus text adventure. You won't do it though, at least I predict you won't. I just thought I'd mention it.

Also, what's all this about Cerebus going over to the Marvel line? Tell me it's not so Dave. Cmon, its not so. Is it?

David Annonamous
Chicago, Ill.,

For some perverse reason I got a real kick out of this letter.

First, maybe you were looking at # an earlier issue.

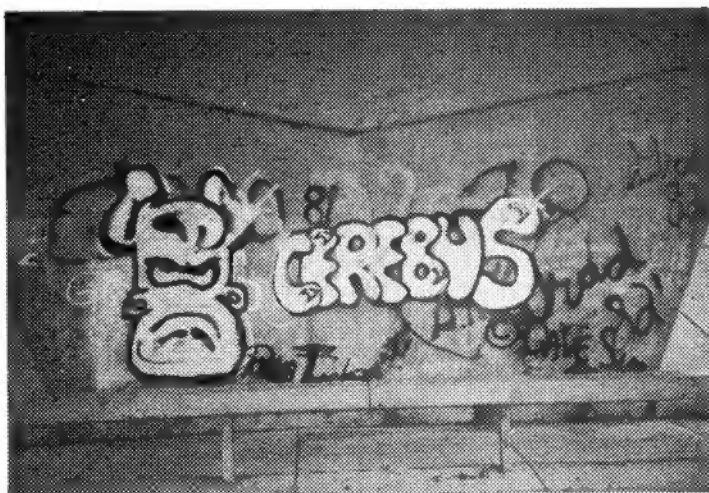

Second, Connie's somewhere on Staten Island, I think.

Finally, it's not so.

Dear Dave,

You like letters with lotsa' numbered questions, eh?

- 1) How are you doing?
- 2) What are your musical tastes? Do you like the band Yes?
- 3) What do Cerebus' reproductive organs look like?
- 4) Have you ever heard of Rick Wakeman? Some of your older photos look a little bit like him.
- 5) Will you print this letter?

Um. . . .guys? Look I'm not saying don't spray-paint on walls. I mean, I don't want to look like some over-the-hill asshole with no sense of humour and God knows if you get your rocks off by running stupid risks it's your business. But speaking as an unindicted co-conspirator I think we should get in the habit of leaving the copyright notice off. I really think we should.

6) Do you like Jon Muth, P. Craig Russel, and Roger Dean?

7) Do you have a favorite issue of Cerebus?

8) What's all this Mike Bannon stuff? Why is his name always appearing on this page? Does he even read Cerebus?

9) Why doesn't Gerhard just call himself Ger Hard?

10) What about Cerebus the movie or Cerebus the mini-series?

11) Gerhard has one name and Cerebus has one eyeball... connection?

12) When's your birthday?

13) What do you want for Christmas?

14) What time is it?

15) What about Cerebus' relatives?

16) Wasn't Mike Bannon on Miami Vice once?

17) If Gerhard is gonna' get a second name, is Cerebus gonna' too?

18) Will you bring back Unique

Stories?

19) Do you ever get tired of Cerebus?

20) What kind of copier do you use?

21) If Sheila Regan of Natick MA is reading, can I have your address?

22) Please?

23) You're really not George Thorogood, are you?

24) Are you gonna' print this letter all at once or in installments of five questions per issue?

25) Do you play a musical instrument?

26) Are you right handed?

27) How do we know that Elrod is an albino if this is a black and white comic?

28) Why don't you number your pages? Don't you know that there are some of us out there that can't count?

29) How 'bout a photo of Stu Ballat?

30) Who the....?

31) Derek? Rob? How ya' doin'?

Interested in a submission for TBA?

32) Alright, Dave. Seriously. Thanks to you, I've added yet another name to my list of heroes. All my life I've been obsessed with art; including narrative art. I've read comix since first grade. Recently, I've traded all my old DC/Marvel titles for just nineteen issues of Cerebus, and it was worth it! I feel that Cerebus is simply the best. I can't see why you don't consider it art. I sure as hell do. I guess it just depends on your definition of art. (Which brings up a good subject to discuss on this letters page. Everybody send in your definition of art. I'll send in mine later so I don't influence anyone else).

Anyway, I think this whole Cerebus deal is miraculous. You, Gerhard, Connie, Mike, Rob, Derek, the whole gang. Sometimes only shitty things get all the love (Madonna!) but not this time.

Screw the idiots who complain to you that they can't understand this stuff. That you should stop using borders and photocopying. That you should bring back Cerebus the barbarian. Whatever you do, do it your way. That's what counts. That's what makes this magazine great. And if anyone thinks this letter is mere mush - think again. The truth is plain to see. The power of the human soul reigns supreme!

To issue #300 and beyond.

Dear Dad,

I heard this ugly rumour that you actually pay Gerhard and Karen. You must cease this despicable practice before Derek and Mike hear about it and want me to pay them. The future of the comics industry rests on your decision on this matter.

Strawberry Jam Forever.

Paul Stockton, President

Paul, you have my word that I only pay Gerhard and Karen because it enables me to shelter another twenty percent of my corporate dividends. And whenever possible I try to get them to take it out in Cerebus merchandise and damaged back issues. Cerebus Jam Forever.

When contacted by this letters page for comment, Dave Sim, President of Aardvark-Vanaheim declined comment saying only the book contained distortions, innuendo, fabrications and libelous assertions. He added that he has never been to Peter Lawford's house and can't recall ever taking a ride in a helicopter that landed on a beach.
